While working in television, I've consistently strived to perform at my best, demonstrating strong organizational skills, effective time management to meet deadlines, and supporting colleagues in achieving their objectives. Additionally, I've acquired proficiency in various software and hardware tools, enabling me to troubleshoot and address management requests efficiently.

I take pride in being approachable and empathetic, which motivated me to become a Mental Health First Aider. This role has proven invaluable both within and outside the workplace, especially in navigating the challenges of a demanding industry and managing people and expectations to meet project deadlines.

In addition to these transferable skills, I've always embraced a unique perspective throughout my career, continually evolving within diverse working environments and fostering creativity. This flexibility has empowered me to approach tasks innovatively, pushing the ideologies of content creation and its culture.

Additional qualities

Recognising the mental health crisis prevalent in the TV and Film industry, and inspired by my partner's work as a counselor, I pursued certification as a Mental Health First Aider. This qualification equips me to provide crucial support and assistance to colleagues facing mental health challenges within our industry.

Team Management - Throughout my career, I've been entrusted with the responsibility of overseeing offline edits and leading teams of assistants and editors. This entails organising and managing multiple teams of offline editors, assisting each team specific material to craft the episodes, and assisting them in prioritising their tasks effectively.

Experienced in Avid Media Composer and basic of Adobe Premiere Pro

The Cardiff Editors Network (CEN), a project I co-created and participate in, is dedicated to uniting and enhancing the post-production sector in Cardiff and South Wales through community engagement. Our aim is to cultivate collaboration and provide support to professionals in this industry, fostering growth and excellence within our local post-production community. In my role within this initiative, I have managed social media accounts, organised events, and coordinated with external partners to further our objectives.

Throughout my TV career journey, I've gained a diverse skill set and navigated different workflows in both unscripted and scripted productions. I've taken advantage of opportunities to edit in both genres, learning from seasoned editors along the way. My contributions to final programs include editing scenes, sequences, and promos that have had a significant impact.

With strong organizational skills, I efficiently manage both footage and personnel in post-production, enabling success in every role I take on. Whether creating detailed logs for incoming footage or closely monitoring material progress, I prioritize seamless communication within the editing and production teams.
